ANONYMOUS

True to Type; A Selection from Letters and Diaries of German Soldiers and Civilians collected on the Soviet-German Front London, Hutchinson, no date (1944?). The first half of the book contains selections from captured diaries presumably edited and printed for propaganda purposes. The extracts, many of which are very short, have been selected to show the Germans in the worst light, or to demonstrate admiration for Russia, but nonetheless have the ring of truth and some are of great interest. None is known to have been printed elsewhere. It is unlikely that many of the writers survived the war.

BRETT, Simon

The Faber Book of Diaries London, Faber and Faber, 1987. The book is arranged in the form of extracts from very many diarists, a few for each day of the year. An entertaining book which may serve to arouse an interest in the diary form or in diarists previously unknown to the reader but the entries are not sufficiently substantial to warrant listing the contributors here.

Letters from Victorian Pioneers; being a series of papers on the early occupation of the Colony, the Aborigines, etc., addressed by Victorian Pioneers to His Excellency Charles Joseph la Trobe, Esq. Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony of Victoria Melbourne, 1898. Re-edited by C.E.Sayers, Melbourne and London, William Heinemann, 1969. Most of the contributions to this book are in the form of letters, some of which are probably based on journals, but only three have retained the diary form to any convincing degree:

GELLIBRAND, Joseph Tice -1836

McMILLAN, Angus -1839

MERCER, George -1838

BROWN, A.F.J.

Essex People, 1750-1900, from their diaries, memoirs and letters Chelmsford, The Essex County Council, Essex Record Office Publication No. 59, 1972. The book consists mainly of substantial extracts from diaries which have not been published elsewhere and there are good biographical notes on the diarists.

Inscribing the Daily; Critical Essays on Women's Diaries Amherst, University of Massachusetts Press, 1996. The book contains "A Theoretical and Critical Introduction" followed by fifteen essays, by various authors, in three sections. Most of the essays display a strongly feminist bias. Very many diarists are mentioned and there are brief quotations from some diaries not printed elsewhere. The main bibliography is cross referenced to this work only for those diarists receiving substantial individual attention, as indicated below the relevant essay.

Section headings and essay titles are:

Part I: Theorizing Women's Diaries:

i - "I Write for Myself and Strangers": Private Diaries as Public Documents, by Lynn Z.Bloom.

ii - Rewriting Her Life: Fictionalization and the Use of Fictional Models in Early American Women's Diaries, by Stephen E.Kagle and Lorenza Gramegna.

Through the Joy of Learning: Diary of 1,000 Adult Learners Leicester, The National Institute of Adult Continuing Education (England and Wales), 1996. "N.I.A.C. was endeavouring to 'show how adults are learning in the 1990's, by taking a snapshot view of activities in any week' of the Autumn term 1995. Individuals and groups were asked to keep a diary for a week, 'showing your choice of learning and what it's been like for you'." There are printed, in full, twenty eight diaries of named individuals, many of which are of interest beyond the stated objective; brief biographical details are given for the contributors to this section. The second half of the book gives extracts from many other diaries, the diarists being identified by name and occupation, to illustrate the themes of motivation, challenge, learning experience and achievement.

Account of the Russian Discoveries Between Asia and America, to which are added the Conquest of Siberia and the History of the Transactions and Commerce between Russia and China London, third edition, revised, 1787. There are many short and interesting accounts of early voyages north and east of Kamchatka, mainly in search of sea otters, which are probably abstracted from logs or diaries but are not substantial enough to warrant individual mention. The authors of more substantial accounts, some of which overlap are:

GLOTTOF, Stephen -1762

Between the Sheets; Sexual Diaries and Gay Men's Sex in the Era of AIDS London, Cassell, 1996. A study of male homosexual behaviour in the United Kingdom with particular reference to the effect of the threat of AIDS. A descriptive and statistical analysis supported by information culled from the sex diaries of nearly six hundred men between 1987 and 1993. Short extracts are given from the diaries of unnamed contributors: mostly mechanical details of sexual activity, but occasionally containing background material of some interest.

A Day at a Time: The Diary Literature of American Women from 1764 to the Present New York, at the City University of New York, The Feminist Press, 1985. A collection designed to introduce and stimulate interest in the diaries of American women and "to create a mosaic of American women's history and to suggest changes in the form, content and function of the diary as a verbal construct". The introduction discusses the writing, reading, editing, form, content and construction of diaries; and there are short background and biographical introductions to each diary extract. The book concludes with thirty pages of bibliography.

DOBBS, Brian

'Dear Diary...' Some studies in self-interest London, Hamish Hamilton, 1974. A study and discussion of diaries and diarists starting from the proposition that the value of a diary lies in the quality of the diarist as a witness. Three diarists are studied in depth and very many others in less detail. There is much quotation and essential bibliographical information. The introduction contains some interesting quotations from diary notes recorded as marginalia in other manuscripts by Irish Scribes.

Diarists treated at length:

BOSWELL, James -1762
EVELYN, John -1631
PEPYS, Samuel -1660

The War the Infantry Knew, 1914-1919: A Chronicle of Service in France and Belgium with the Second Battalion His Majesty's Twenty-Third Foot, The Royal Welch Fusiliers: founded on personal records, recollections and reflections, assembled, edited and partly written by One of their Medical Officers privately published, P.S.King Ltd., 1938. New edition London, Jane's Publishing, 1987. cardinal paperback, 1989. A full chronicle of the war as seen by the officers and men of The Second Battalion of the Royal Welch Fusiliers. The framework of the book which is presented as a scrupulously dated narrative, is the diary of Captain J.C.Dunn (qv). Many other contributors are named and their contributions are identified in footnotes, but it is not possible to say with certainty which are taken from diaries and which from memoir and recollection. Both Robert Graves and Siegfried Sasson served with The Royal Welch Fusiliers, as did Private Frank Richards, the author of Old Soldiers Never Die.

EMERSON, Amelia Forbes

Naushon Data privately printed, 1963, 1984 and 2003. Naushon is a private island off Woods Hole, Massachusetts, once owned by the Forbes family. The book contains chiefly diaries and personal correspondence of the daughters of Edward Coffin Jones: Emma Chambers (1847-1920) invalid in Litchfield, Conn., and New York, New York, Amelia Hickling Jones (1849-1935) civic leader, of New Bedford, and Sarah Coffin (Jones) Forbes (1852-1891) wife of John Malcolm Forbes, of Milton, Massachusetts, relating to daily events, social life, and family affairs. The authors are not mentioned in the main bibliography. The book is a supplement to the author's Early History of Naushon Island privately printed, 1935, which probably also contains extracts from diaries.

EVANS, Elizabeth

01

Weathering the Storm: Women of the American Revolution New York, Charles Scribner's Sons, 1975. A discussion of the lives and status of women in America at the time of the Revolution illustrated by contemporary diaries and journals. The editor does not make clear whether she has worked from published or manuscript sources, nor the extent of any abridgements. There is extensive editorial 'scene setting' but the diaries and extracts are allowed to stand on their own.

Private Chronicles; A Study of English Diaries London, Oxford University Press, 1974. A study of the 'diary as literature' which elaborates the concepts of 'the book of the self' and 'imprint' and points to the idea of 'serial autobiography' as the most developed form of diary, that of Anaïs Nin being its apotheosis. Closely argued and often challenging; a valuable book. Many other diarists are mentioned in passing.

Diarists subject to substantial discussion:

Private Pages; Diaries of American Women, 1830's-1970's New York, Ballantine Books, 1986. Substantial excerpts from the diaries of thirteen American girls and women, most of which are not printed elsewhere. A brief introduction examines the appeal of the diary form and the editor's motives and concludes that "These private pages can give us, their readers, permission to be human." Each excerpt is prefaced by a short introduction and concluded by an afterword.

2. -Scottish Diaries and Memoirs 1746-1843 with an introduction by J.D.Mackie. Stirling, Eneas Mackay, 1942. Because of the much larger amount of available material compared with the earlier volume, consideration is confined to writers 'who gave sidelights on the social, economic, and political state of Scotland during the vital hundred years which saw the passing of the old order and the birth of a new age...' Most of the writers included are not, unfortunately, diarists.

The Observant Traveller: Diaries of Travel in England Wales and Scotland in the County Record Offices of England and Wales London, Her Majesty's Stationery Office, for the Association of County Archivists, 1989. There are characteristic extracts (on pp 1-101) from one hundred and thirty seven diaries, few of which have been printed elsewhere. Many of the diaries appear to be of great interest but the brief nature of the extracts has precluded mention of the authors in the main bibliography. The book is intended to provide a guide to the nature of the material in County Archives, and includes a comprehensive listing of the manuscripts and their locations. (See also the annotation in the Bibliography of Bibliographies section).

Intimacy and Terror: Soviet Diaries of the 1930s translated by Carol A. Flath. New York, The New Press, 1995. The collection is designed to illuminate the ordinary lives of Russians living under the Stalin terror and many of the diaries, none of which have appeared before in English, are vivid accounts of great interest, some of them of literary significance. In their useful general introduction the editors say that they "...believe that the essence of a diary is the space of tension between different - often heterogeneous - times, between the personal, the intimate, sometimes the bodily, and the social" but the brief introductions to each diary, and the end notes could usefully have been expanded to help the reader disentangle the many textual complexities.

Voices from the Home Front Newton Abbot, David and Charles, 2004. A compilation of letters, diaries, memoirs, interviews and some published sources, mainly taken from the collections of The Imperial War Museum. There are extracts from many diaries, some of which appear to be of more than passing interest. Unfortunately the format of the book makes it impossible to make any useful references to individual diarists.

ANTAEUS: Journals, Notebooks & Diaries No. 61. U.S.A., The Ecco Press, 1988; London, Collins Harvill, 1989. "The first paperback edition of Antaeus, celebrates the journal as a prose genre." Reissued, with an introduction, as Our Private Lives: Journals, Notebooks and Diaries Hopewell, New Jersey, The Ecco Press, 1989. The diaries and extracts are preceded by an article on diary writing, by Gail Godwin. Contributions were solicited from the authors and may have been extracted from existing diaries, kept for the occasion, or written retrospectively as memoir or fiction; the editor has made no comment upon the likely provenance in individual cases, but dates are given only for those writers who appear in the main bibliography and whose works are probably a genuine diaries.

Nine Wartime Lives: Mass-Observation and the Making of the Modern Self Oxford University Press, 2010. This volume is an "experiment in historiography" which examines the "apparent contrast between wartime citizenship and contemporary individualism", using mass observation diaries as the source material. Unusually, only Lilian Rogers is pseudonymous and there is background material which is useful for those diarists which have been published elsewhere. Each diarist is the subject of a separate chapter but direct quotation is minimal and chronologically confusing, some have been referred to in other studies but only those published separately or in anthologies are referenced in the main bibliography.

Covered Wagon Women: Diaries and Letters from the Western Trails, 1840-1890 Glendale, California and Spokane, Washington, Arthur H. Clarke, eleven volumes, 1983-1993. A collection of women's accounts, the majority in diary form, of the westward emigration, most of which are either not published elsewhere or not easily accessible; many have been re-edited from the original manuscripts. There is a general introduction to each volume and the diaries are individually prefaced by such biographical and background material as is available. The final volume contains the series index, the series bibliography and a revised edition of the large folding map of the western emigrant trails published by the Oregon-California Trails Association, 1993. A paperback edition, with additional introductory material to each volume, has been published by the University of Nebraska Press.

English Family Life, 1576-1716; An Anthology from Diaries Oxford, Basil Blackwell, 1988. An examination of Courtship and Marriage, Married life and Widowhood, Pregnancy, Childbirth and Infancy, Adolescence and Departure from Home, Parents' Old Age and Deaths and Other Kinsfolk in the diarists' own words. There is a short introduction to each section as well as the general introduction which discusses the diary as historical source. Wherever possible the editor has taken his material from the manuscript diaries rather than their printed versions and the book therefore contains much useful and interesting material not to be found elsewhere. There is an excellent Biographical and Bibliographical Appendix which, inter alia, details the present whereabouts of the manuscripts and assesses the reliability of the printed editions.

KAGLE, Steven E.

02

A three volume survey of American Diary Literature in the Twayne's United States Authors Series. Professor Kagle has selected what he considers to be the best American diaries in subject groups, for instance Spiritual Journals, Travel Diaries, War Diaries, etc. There is a general introduction to each subject group and the work of individual diarists is then summarised, and discussed with brief quotation. Prefaces and introductory chapters deal more generally with questions of the nature and qualities of the diary form considered as literature, and the development of the American diary tradition.

Ariadne's Thread: A Collection of Contemporary Women's Journals New York, Harper and Row, 1982. The compiler "has been teaching workshops on journal writing for many years" and some of the previously unpublished diaries in this collection have apparently come to her notice in the course of her work: this may account for the slightly self-conscious feel of some of the contributions. Also, very many of the contributors are professional writers who seem to have been permitted great latitude in matters of selection, self-editing and rewriting. Nevertheless many good diaries are included and the book is refreshingly lacking in polemical feminism, although selections tend to be of very small and tightly focused parts, often widely spaced, from much longer works. Diaries are grouped under the headings of Work, Self, Love and Friendship, Family, Being Somewhere Else, Society, and Nature.

A Book of One's Own: People and Their Diaries New York, Ticknor & Fields, 1984. Paperback Editions: Quality Paperback Book Club, 1985; Penguin Editions, 1986; Hungry Mind Press, 1995. A celebration of the diary: comment on and quotation from hundreds of diarists, categorised as Chroniclers, Travelers, Pilgrims, Creators, Apologists, Confessors and Prisoners. The quotations and commentary are woven into a continuous exposition which is informative and entertaining. A valuable introduction to the form in all its manifestations with a useful "reader's bibliography".

The Spring Voyage: The Jerusalem Pilgrimage in 1458 London, John Murray, 1964. A narrative account of a pilgrimage from Venice to Jerusalem, and the return, in 1458, based upon the accounts of six diarists. There is much of interest but the contributions of individuals are not sufficiently distinguished to enable separate entries in the main bibliography, with the exception of William Wey, whose itinerary has also been published separately.

The six diarists:

ANONYMOUS, Dutch pilgrim
BUTIGELLA, Giovanni Matteo
CAPODILISTA, Gabriele
Da SANSEVERINO, Roberto
PELCHINGER, Anton
WEY, William -1458

MOFFAT, Mary Jane and PAINTER, Charlotte

Revelations: Diaries of Women New York, Random House, 1974; Viking Books, paperback, 1975. The introduction enlarges upon the hypothesis that in their diaries women illustrate the inner conflict between 'love' and 'work' and that the resolution of this conflict releases the 'power' of their individual natures. There follow substantial illustrative extracts from thirty two diarists, each preceded by a few paragraphs of introduction, and the book is concluded by an afterword which crystallises the hypothesis as a theory of 'psychic bisexuality'.

Diarists included:

ANONYMOUS (Japanese Woman) -1895

Diaries of Court Ladies of Old Japan London, Constable, 1921. Three 'diaries' from the early eleventh century Japanese Court. Diary notes, reminiscences and poems. The diary of Izumi Shikibu was excluded from the first edition of the main bibliography on the grounds that it is a romantic narrative founded upon the story of her love-affairs. A reassessment of the nature of early Japanese diaries has reversed that decision.

1. -English Diaries; A review of English Diaries from the sixteenth to the twentieth century with an introduction on diary writing London, Methuen, 1923. This is the first substantial study of the diary as a genre and remains an interesting and valuable book, particularly because the chosen diaries are evaluated qua diaries and not by reference to their illustration of, or support for any other thesis or sectional interest. There is a discussion and extracts from the diaries, some very brief, of all the diarists listed below. The second edition of the book, also dated 1923, contains only minor corrections of the first edition; there is no additional material.

4. - British Diarists London, Ernest Benn, 1930. Benn's Sixpenny Library, No. 70. A survey and discussion of British Diaries and Diarists with comment and biographical details. Chapter Headings are: Introductory; Historical Diarists; Religious Diarists; Travel and Sport; Social and Literary Diaries; Military and Professional Diaries; Domestic Diaries; Diaries of Women and Children; The Best Diarists. The book concludes with a short bibliography.

5. - The Little Torch; Quotations from diaries of the past for every day of the year London, Routledge, 1938. The definition of a diary is stretched further than is allowed even in this bibliography but there are short extracts from very many diaries, a few of which may not have appeared elsewhere. The book is entertaining but would have been of greater value had more bibliographical and biographical information been given.

Domestic Soldiers: Six Women's Lives in the Second World War London, Constable, 2010. This study is based on Mass Observation diaries and reports. There is much quotation and summary from the diaries, two of which have been printed more fully elsewhere, but it is fragmented and scattered; there is some interesting background but no comprehensive study of the diary texts is possible.

Diarists mentioned are, with the exception of Nella Last, pseudonymous:

Women's Diaries of the Westward Journey New York, Schocken Books, 1982. An examination of ninety six diaries and memoirs between 1843 and 1866 of women on the Western Trail to Oregon and California, which attempts to isolate the motives, behaviour and special concerns peculiar to women in embarking on and enduring the perils and hardships of the journey. There are very many brief extracts from diaries in the text with useful bibliographical information on printed and manuscript sources, and three diaries, two of which are not printed elsewhere, are given abridged but describing the whole journey.

Diarists included at length:

GOULD, Jane Holbrook (later TOURTILLOT) -1862

KNIGHT, Amelia Stewart -1853

RUDD, Amelia Allen -1852

SEARS, Clara Endicott

Bristol Siren Nights: Diaries and Stories of the Blitzes Bristol, Rankin Brothers, 1944. Reissued Bristol, Redcliffe Press, 1989. Part I of this compilation contains extracts from ten diaries of Bristolians during the Blitzes. The diaries were submitted for publication in response to public advertisement by the clergyman compiler and many of them seem to have been twice edited, by their authors and by the compiler, this sometimes makes it difficult to judge whether the text comes from a genuine diary or is mere reminiscence; all but two have been given the benefit of the doubt. Part II of the book contains 'stories of the blitz' and it is possible that a few of these are also extracted from diary records. The diarists are:

Diaries and Journals of Literary Women from Fanny Burney to Virginia Woolf London, Macmillan, 1990. Full and interesting examination and discussion of the diaries of eight women writers, which "offer a further insight into the extent of their alienation from popular images of female propriety and, by demonstrating their interest in areas not normally considered to be a female province, show how women's writing for publication was most carefully stage-managed so as to stay within accepted limits".

Gold Coast Diaries: Chronicles of Political Officers in West Africa, 1900-1919 edited by Anthony Kirk-Greene. London, The Radcliffe Press, 2000. This is a collection of a large number of extracts, a few substantial, diaries which colonial officers of The Colony, Ashanti and Northern Territories of the Gold Coast in West Africa were required to keep, transcribed from the national archives at Accra. The diaries which, although official in the sense that they were a requirement of office, were intended to be informal in style, were read by superiors but retained on station for the information of succeeding officers. The extracts printed have been selected, edited and reselected by the compiler and her subsequent editor from a very large mass of original material and there is little indication of the extent and character of omissions from individual diaries, some of which are of great interest.

Diarists included:

ARMITAGE, Cecil Hamilton -1917
ATTERBURY, John Lucas -1915
BARTLETT, H.E. -1915
BERKELEY, Harold Maurice -1913
BOYLE, David Hugh -1914
BRANCH, H.C. -1914
BRECKENRIDGE, Thomas William -1915
